"One story... many stories", oil on marble, by S. Portelli

There is a light in the well... it is the invisible present.

The invisible is part of all of us, for me it can be the healthy side of me, as I cannot live it to the fullest, there is always the curiosity of keeping it near in order not to lose contact with it, all the while giving me one more reason to understand the other who is different from me.

He who doesn't feel the invisible is one that is internally unwell, and doesn't see his own light.

Santina Portelli, psychologist, has collaborated with universities in Rome and Milan for the training of teachers and psychologists. She is affected by spastic quadriplegia.

A painter, she is an active member of the V.D.M.F.K., Worldwide association which promotes the work of painters who paint with the mouth and/or foot. www.vdmfk.com
